

Image: ATP

Christoph M. Achammer

Chairman of the Board ATP architects engineers and Member of the ACROSS Advisory Board

"In unsettled times, it is once again up to the real estate industry to provide stability. In addition to this, the process of designing and building is facing a digitalization-driven revolution that will lead to huge productivity gains. The incremental use of a digital twin in all building assignments—from the initial idea via all phases of design and construction to the accompaniment of the operation of a building—is a safeguard against things going wrong. It makes the building process truly industrial for the first time and demonstrates the financial impact of lifecycle-oriented projects."